

Closing the Relationship

A mentoring relationship should reach a learning conclusion. Ending a mentoring relationship is something that should be celebrated. It means you've accomplished your goals and are ready to take the next step in your learning and development.

To end your mentoring relationship, book a final meeting together and have a focused conversation about the learning that took place throughout the mentoring process. Answer the questions together to measure your success. Congratulations!!

